DEADPRESS

INK UNDER PRESSURE

PRINT LOUD. PRINT AGAIN.

NO SOFT SELL.

A loud poster does not need much room.
Deadpress packs heavy uprights into a narrow line.
Its slab feet lock together; small bites in the ink keep the impression from looking machine-perfect.

Print it.
Pass it on.

The lowercase is drawn as lowercase.

The figures share a 390-unit advance.

F and f carry short right bearings; V has room.

Chipped corners are outlines, not a texture filter.

The ink dries. The noise doesn't.
